INFLUENCE OF DISCARNATE PEOPLE IN MENTAL DISEASE AND ITS RESPECTIVE APPROACH

Sérgio Thiesen, MD.^{1*}; Caio Abujadi, MD.²; Viviane Jacob, MD.³; Samira Jacob, MD.⁴; Diana N Cavalcanti, PhD⁵.

¹Ministry of Health, National Institute of Cardiology, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.; ²Caminho Azul Association, RJ, Brazil; ³Municipal Secretary of Health, RJ, Brazil; ⁴Philippe Pinel Municipal Institute of Psychiatry, RJ, Brazil; ⁵Federal Fluminense University, RJ, Brazil

BACKGROUND

The incidence and prevalence of mental illness are increasing worldwide (Baxter et al. 2013). Epigenetics clarifies the onset of the mental illness environment, transforming stress stimulation into neuroimmune neuroinflammation and adaptive endocrine response. The spiritist form of understanding and its therapeutic procedure has been studied for over 150 years (Lucchetti et al 2011). Since the Allan Kardec research group in 1860, more than two thousand books have been published regarding the spiritual environment as an essential point of interest for understanding psychopathology (Agorastos et al. 2019). The hypothesis is that the pathological environment is created by individual, providing self-obsession and obsession of others even after discarnation (Xavier, 1958). It is proposed that the only way to prevent and cure obsession is by adopting a different way of thinking and acting based on the knowledge and moral conduct brought by Jesus Christ. His attitude toward hardships and the exaltation of love for all creation can lift the mind to a more significant healing potential. In addition, it is important to consider the spiritual treatment of the psychiatric patient provided in Spiritist Centers through magnetic-spiritual passes (laying-on of hands), gospel education and disobsession meetings.

OBJECTIVES

To estimate the importance of the influence of the spirits in mental diseases

MATERIALS AND METHODS

RESULTS AND CONCLUSION

In a non-controlled prospective study of 84 patients with mental diseases, we were able to perceive many different spirits in each case and to act in a psychotherapeutic manner, through dialogue with them with clear improvement of clinical manifestations of a significant percentage of cases and even resulted in a complete and sustained recovery of many of them. In all cases the spirits were of human beings who have lived their lives in the past such as we live ours in the present. They were now in the spiritual realm that is a world parallel to ours. They interfered psychically in the mind and in the lives of the patients, causing harm and maintaining the symptoms of specific mental diseases. The ties between these spirits and the patients were established in previous lives. Our results suggest promising evidence of influence of spiritual beings in mental health and more research should be conducted.

REFERENCES

- AGORASTOS A. et al. 2019. Front Psychiatry. 2019;10:118.
 BAXTER AJ et al. 2013. PLOS ONE 8(6): e65514.
 DE MIRANDA HC. 1984. Dialogue with the darkness. Federação Espírita Brasileira, 1ª Ed.
 HERCULANO PIRES, J. 1979. Obsession, passes and fraternal dialogue. Editora Paideia Ltda.
 HU TW. 2003. J Ment Health Policy Econ 6:135-143.
 LOPEZ AD et al. (editors). 2006. Global Burden of Disease and Risk Factors. Oxford University Press/World Bank; New York, NY.
 LUCCHETTI AL et al. 2015. Explore (NY), 11 (5): 377-86.
 LUCCHETTI Get al. 2011. Evid Based Complement Alternat Med. doi: 10.1155/2011/835945.
 MOREIRA-ALMEIDA A & KOSS-CHIOINO JD. 2009. Psychiatry: Interpersonal and Biological Processes, 72 (3): 268-283.
 MOREIRA-ALMEIDA A & LOTUFO NETO F. 2005. Transcult Psychiatry, 42 (4): 570-95.
 OLIVEIRA T. Talking to Spirits in Mediumistic Meetings. Editora Allan Kardec, 1ª Ed.
 SCHUBERT SC. Obsession/disobsession: spiritist prophylaxis and therapy, Federação Espírita Brasileira. 2ª Ed.
 THIESEN S. 2012. The Importance of Spiritism to the Understanding of the Mechanisms of Psychiatric Disorders. 20th European Congress of Psychiatry, P-439.
 THORNICROFT G et al. 2016. World Psychiatry. 15 (3): 276-286..
 WANG PS et al 2007. Lancet, 370 (9590): 841-850.
 XAVIER FC. 1958. Pensamento e Vida. Federação Espírita Brasileira.
 XAVIER FC & VIEIRA W. Disobsession. Federação Espírita Brasileira. 28ª Ed.